Top 5 Tips for Buying Marijuana in Denver, Colorado!

1. There are coupons everywhere for discounts on marijuana!

If you flip through local publications such as The Westword or The Rooster, you will be sure to save yourself a few bucks at the local pot shop. Here is a link to a map of Westword locations where you can pick up a copy.

<http://www.westword.com/locations/map/>. You can get some great deals especially if you are a new customer. Take advantage of it when you see it. Savings could range from a free joint all the way up to half off your purchase! If you are up to the task, you can even visit different dispensaries to get everyone's deal. It is a win/win situation for you because you now have more weed, and more dollars in your pocket!

2. Talk to the bud tender that is helping you make your decision.

Ask them what their personal favorites are. Also ask them what strains sell out the fastest. Asking how the marijuana was grown can help you make a decision that is better suited for your personal needs and help you avert any health risks. There are several different ways to grow marijuana and each dispensary cultivates their strains differently. If you have certain health risks, you will want to be aware of what type of fertilizers and insecticides the dispensary uses. If organically grown weed is what you are looking for, Medicine Man Medical Market In Denver, Colorado will be happy to tell you all about the organic soils, fertilizers, and water methods they use. Don't be afraid to ask questions! For some, marijuana is a medicine and for others it is for recreation. Regardless of why you are smoking, you should know what you are smoking and the bud tender is the in house expert.

3. It is a good habit to look over your precious little buds before you check out and head for home.

Mainly you are looking for powdery mildew, bugs, and bad cures on your weed. If your weed is properly cured (dried) then a stem will snap when it's bent. If the stem bends instead of breaking then the product was likely rushed to the shelf. In that situation, you are paying for water weight and you should pick another strain. The buds should be dry but should not crumble. Smell is a good indicator as well. If the pot smells green, kind of like after you mow your lawn then it was most likely not cured properly. If your weed is cured well it will bring out the delicious aroma of the strain rather than smelling like wet grass. If it does not have the qualities previously mentioned, you are better off making another choice.

You are looking for a bud that has been trimmed neatly, is properly cured, has an inviting aroma, and sparkles in the light (the sparkles are THC crystals, the more the better).

4. Check with your hotel, and/or planned events to see if marijuana consumption is allowed at their facility.

Legalization is new to everyone especially business owners. It is taking time for businesses to get everything in line to make their venue(s) 420 friendly. As time progresses, more places will offer cannabis sections for those looking to enjoy cannabis products. Don't simply assume that it is okay to light up just because it is legalized. The worst thing they can say is that marijuana is not allowed at that establishment. Asking and knowing where you can and can't smoke could quite possibly keep you from getting a ticket or being charged extra for certain fees. It is also not respectful to enter public establishments shortly after you have smoked if you smell like marijuana. We want to be respectful of families and children and other patrons who may prefer to not be involved with our recreational activities. A good way to look at it is like alcohol. If you wouldn't drink or be drunk in a certain type of venue you don't want to go in there smelling like marijuana either.

5. Know the local laws.

You legally purchased some marijuana! Congratulations! Now what? In the state of Colorado, it is illegal for anyone to sell marijuana to people unless they have the proper licensing. It is legal however, to give marijuana as a "gift" to someone (obviously assuming they are over the age of 21. Doing so otherwise is still highly illegal). Chances are, unless you know someone growing it, buying marijuana from a certified establishment is your best bet. You can find a list of recreational marijuana dispensaries here. Additionally driving while under the influence of marijuana can get you a DUI. The legal limit in Colorado is 5 nanograms of THC in your blood (if it sounds small, that's because it is). Enjoy marijuana, but PLEASE, don't smoke and drive. It is also illegal to take the marijuana across state lines. Make sure to leave your Colorado marijuana IN Colorado when you go. We hope you found this helpful! Have a safe and fun time!
